FRANCES SANDOVAL: FOUNDER OF MOTHERS AGAINST GANGS

Written by June Grayson

Photographed by Richard Grayson

You notice first how small she is and how gentle, hardly an intimidating presence. You have to listen carefully because she speaks so softly. She stops to embrace a friend, a mother whose son was also a victim of gang violence. She wears a black and white button that says: Mothers Against Gangs. She is here to present the awards at the first anniversary meeting of the Aurora Chapter of Mothers Against Gangs. Meet Frances Sandoval, the founder of Mothers Against Gangs and the leader of this new grassroots movement to break the power of gangs.

She is beautiful - not only physical beauty, though she has that too - but the inner glow of someone who cares passionately about others and never tires of serving them. She revives your gfaith in the power of the old religious virtures. She proves that one person can, indeed, make a difference.

Sandoval, born in Chicago of Mexican parents, formed Mothers

Against Gangs in 1986 after her 15 year old son was brutally murdered by a gang member.

On ??<> ARthur Sandoval went with a freinds.

Even though oterh gagns mebmers identified the killer, police did not act to find him. they told her it wasn't improtant. Sandvoal ahd to do all fo the work herself. It was not until she went on local Hispanci telelvision and offered a $1,000 reward that informantss came forth and gave infrmatin elading t the arrest f the guilty gang meber nly a few locks frm where ARthur's killing td place. Sandval did nt rest until he was arrested, treid, and envicted fr ARthur's murder. HE is nw serving a et35 year sentence fr the crime.

Her struggle for justice sensitized her to the plight of other mothers who had lost children to gang violence. Compared to other mothers, though I was lucky because I knew my legal rights. I was determined not to give up until ARtrhurs killer was ofund and borught t justice.

Sandoval quit high school in 19?? to marry and have three children. After her divorce she returned to school to get her general equivalency degree, study communications in college, and return to her community to work at a Spanish newspaper. Now she works full time as administrative assistant to Juan Soliz, alderman of Chicago's 25th precinct in the heart of Chicago and thePilsen neighborhood. in Chicago's ? district. She understands Chicago and what it takes to get things done. "In the midst of my own suffering, I met all of these other suffering mothers who had no one to tell them their rights and help them after theri children became gang members.

"I had heard about MADD, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, and I thought, there is no difference, our children are victims too," Sandoval says.

Sandoval modeled Mothers AGainst Gangs on MADD's charter and bylaws. There is no connection between the two organizations.

as well as mothers who ahve chidlren in gagns, and advocacy throught the legal system.

Sandoval is proud that MAG helped in the successful campaign for the passage of the Illinois safe School Zone Act, the law that permists muveniles to be tried as adults if they are charged with drug trafficking or using weapons in a school or within 1,000 feet of a school.

Because Frances experienced this pain and loneliness herself after Arthur's murder, she was able to identify with all of the other victims and their families who suffered from gang violence. "When you are a victim of gang violence in Chicago," Jesse Gonzales, the executive director of Chicago's MOthers Against Gangs office, explains, "You have to go into court and go through preliminary heargins, you may not even understand English, and you don't even know what the law is. The police may make insinuations that your daughter or son was involved with the gangs and that is why he or she was attacked. This is not always the case. Innocent victims do suffer. So Mothers AGainst Gangs will meet with the families, support them emotionally, explain to them their rights and that they have the right to demand that the law be responsive to their needs. Mothers AGainst Gagns members will go into court with them and trasnlate for them, and that community pressure makes the police and courts more responsive to the victim's rights."

distinction of ranking number 2, after Los Angeles, in the number of gang related murders. Yet, in 1986, without any hope of success, Sandoval stepped out in faith and determination. She started a new organization, Mother Against Gangs. Every war has its turning point, that historians can look back to and say, yes, that is when the turnaround started. We didn't know it then, but that was when the tide of battle turned in our favor. Already, members of some communities, where Mothers AGainst Gagns has been working, says they see the turnaround.

The blacks have Rosa Parks, who started the victorious civil rights moement. Now the Hispanics ahve Frances Sandoval, who some dare to hope has started the turnaround against gang control of o22igrant.ur cities and our young people.

In 1985, Arthur Sandoval, 13, and his sister, explain what happened here.

Sandoval has a mission - to bring peace to the neighborhoods. She is nto out to avenge her son's death.

Young newcomers to an area are vespecially vulnerable to && gang recruitment. The gang member who stabbed ARthur was an illegal immigrant. Sandoval feels that the gang used him to do their dirty work. They told him what to do - go stab him.

he mother must make it clear to her child. I love you but not as a gang member. She must withdraw her support. It doesn't seem like a big thing, byt Sandoval thinks it is effective.

When MAG members go to court with the victim's family, they won't fee I so alone. The judge and gang members will see that they aren't alone. They will say - oh, oh, the mothers are here, and they will be more careful.

/sabndoval was in court twelve times while she attemtped to bring ARthur's kilelrs to justice.

Sometimes after a violent crime, no one informs the victims or their families of their legal and compensatory rights. MAG members help them get what is coming to them.

sANDOVAL STARTED HER war with a special attack against gang graffiti. You go to school to learn, not to see a gang symbol at the school, day after day. The schools must not allow it.

They promote more police coopration. Most families felt unifnormed about police action. <Mag ,members help monitor police progress in pursuing gang offenders.

2ag promotes eduation about gangs.,. so that young kids no longer think they are cool or that they have to join. the tell the kids, gang membership gives you a false sense fo saftey. If you become a gang member, you will either kill or be killed eventually. Is that safe? Is that cool?

Besides showing the bad side of gang membership, MAG encourages the school and parents `to offer more after, school activities so that kids iwll have a positive alternative.

Xhe graduated from Loop Junior College, worked in data processing, rked at a spanish language new d at a spanish newspaper, worked as a court interpreter, elghsin spanish, worked with the Legal assistnace foundation of Chciago which helps indigents. She has always been involved in community activities. She currently works for Juan Psoliz,

You might even think that fate was preapreing her for her tasks.

When you know in yoru ehart that something is right, and then you don't ask anyone what to do, you don't try to determine in you will success, then no matter what anyone tells you, then you have to proceed.

I have always felt confident inside myself, because I know I am doing my best aI am happy and content.

I will be honest with you, even if my son had not died, I would have had ot do this. Because tthe violence is wrong. The sensless killing is wrongl..

Last winter she did two interviews on a liami local spanish station about MAg. A Marian Cortez, Hollywood police officer with the gang crime until they now have a spinoff. Neigfhbros against gangs.

MAG is not the first coommunity organization to address the problem of gang violence. According to Sister Leticia Gomez, a Chicana and member of the Catholic Lay Sisters of Christian Communities, the Concerned Parents of the Soledad Enrichment Action, (SEA) began sixteen years ago and has grown to five lcoations in the Los Angeles area. They seek to educate, empower, and enable concerned aprents help their children resist gang membership, thus reducing gang violence in the East Los Agneles area.

Mothers Against Gangs shows mothers how to focus their awesome power. "Everyone has a mother, right? Sandoval says.

"Kids, even gang members, love their mothers. When mothers learn how to assume their responsiblites, using tough love and even kicking their kids out of the house if they don't obey the house rules, they can effect changes they never thought possible."

According to Anthony De Marco, supervisor of the North Central Illinois Narcotic Task force, says, "I know of only one country in the world today that has made a dent in the drug problem. In Malaysia, anyone caught dealing drugs is immediately hanged. Our judicial system is overburdened and the punishment no longer fits the crime. An organization such as Mothers Against Gangs can put pressure on our courts to enforce our laws.

Our political system will respond to community involvement when it has to, it is just a function of time."

Dr. Felix Padilla, Cuban professor of sociology and director of the Center for Hispanic Research, DePaul University, Chicago, is studying the relationship between Chicago street gangs and drug dealing. "The increase in street gangs, drug dealings, and violence may be related to a new economic phenomenon: the shutting out of our ghetto youth from the labor market," Padilla says. "Always before in our country's history, the lowly and dispossessed have been able to work themselves up the economic ladder and out into the mainstream of society. These kids aren't dumb. There are no neighborhood factory and laboring jobs.

In that respect, gangs function as an alternative employer and underground economy."

According to Dr. Richard Martin, head of the department of criminal justice at Aurora University, Aurora, some gang members can leave the gangs by going to college. "They make it out through athletic ability or they are lucky enough to have a caring high school counselor. They tell me they can return to their old neighborhoods to visit and the gangs don't bother them.

Some former gang members seem to respect them because they were able to get out. Of course, there is no place for them in their old home."

Thousands of children all over America have been victims of gang violence. Thousands of mothers have wept and are still weeping bitter tears. Yet Sandoval was able to transmute her personal anguish into effective action.

"If my children had not been there for me, if my family had not been there for me," Sandoval explains, "There would be no Frances Sandoval today and no Mothers Against Gangs.

"Many Hispanic women have no support. I was fortunate.

I also had my priest who was my psychologist, my psychiatrist, my everything. One has to deal with unbearble pain and overwhelming guilt.

"People have to understand that gang violence is not just simple manslaughter and murder. It is the destruction of entire families. It is terrorism against the entire community - against the entire country.

Murder rates in the big cities continue to rise. Officials blame drugs, gangs, and guns for the escalating crisis.

"I remember so clearly how it was before Arthur died. My three children would sit on the front steps and wait for my car to drive up. Then they would coming running to meet me and I would smile.

"Three months after Arthur's murder, I pulled up and parked my car. My other son, who was then ten years old, came running and said - oh, Mommy, you are smiling, you haven't smiled at me since Arthur died. I thought - oh, my God, I have deprived my son, who is also hurting and missing his brother, of even his mother's smile.

"When you know in your heart you are right, you have to usght for what needs to be done, no matter what the cost. It is the time is ripe for a signal from the courts and the judges that our communites will no longer allow this behavior that simple."

judges should have no other alternative but to preside and entence and take into consdieration the tragedy that is affecting the entire city fo Chciago as well as the rest of the nation the human tragedy we must have th death penalty for these crimes that are so unspeakable. They are not onl 2rders and arson, they are acts of terrorism against a whole civiliazation.

MAG will be presented depending on where it is %!eel they have to belong to a gang for protection it is dangerous for a child to try to resist the gangs if he coesn't have an tappens is that the aprents need an education, they have to aware of adult to go to.

what is relaly going on.

it is not enought to say, now don't you get invovled in a gang.

a child might say, Mom, I don't want to go to that store, don't mkae me.

and the mother things he is jstu being stubbonr and she makes him go

she doens't know that what he is really trying to say is that a ganging is haning out inf front of that store, and everytime I go there, they ask em what I be about so if the child can't go to an adult he can trust, he will try ot negotiate it himself whell hwo can an adult negotiate sfaegtl.

it is not against the law to belong to a gang.

however, when someone threatnes you with bodily harm, that is a felony and that is agaisnt the law.

what good does it do to have laws if they are not enforced.

so the kid tells his mother they are oging to beat him up she has to report it to the police.

Then MAG will put pressure on the police if they don't act.

no, in mot situations the police are acting.

if they are not acting, we want ot know about it.

thaty si why we have our community speakers and eladers.

It is very important to let the parents know they have rights.

that if you clal the opolice nad no one comes, that is wrong. you ahve a right for the police to come and for police protection.

it is good to have an organization there to remind the police don't know what is in the background of some of these worst gagn

According to Officer Robert Honegger, it is important for a community to recognize a problem early and for everyone to work toegher to solve it.

I think that Mrs. Sandeval coming out here was the motivator to start osmething goin in our comjunity.

The city and plice had already establesd a group that was meeting. She motivated the parents, especially, to get invovled and gave them some good proactical ideas about what to do.

The wareness tautgth by mag helped a lot. the parent and adult education. It helped them understand what they could do to counter the gangs.

The pressuyre was put back on the kids. hey, if you are oging to get invovled in gangs, you are oging down the wrong street the aprents wer eable to demosntrate that to the kids, that it was a dead end.

we still have gangs, but they don't have as many follweor now.

mag will have to remaina ctive, hwoever, the big mistake is when people don't want to acknowledge the problem. and wont' deal with it. It won't go away by itself.

Rebecca Herrera, &ived in Sterling all her life, always been in comm1ity activities. started becoming aware of gang activities in 1985-1986.I worked in a head start program and fmailies had older children. Teens always like me, don't see me as a threat.

The p&ice and the citya dminsitration had started a tsk force. Lots of people in our community would not believe that we could have a problem with gangs. Finally it became unavoidable, graffiti in the school bathrooms on ntoebooks.

I ehard from the kdis directly, the graffiti, the dirnking aprties, and then the criminal activities such as burglaries.

II think the teenagers still think I am their friend. I approacht it that I am not trying to get rid of the gangs, but orgainzed May in summer of 1988had a community meeting in June, 1988, asked the puboic to come, francse was here, cuts across all racial and cono2ic lines, just see that the ocmmunity offers options to our chidlren.

we have large population of Hsipanics, blacks and orietnsals. I think economonics had a lot of to wiht it. There are lots of acitivities in our ocmmunity for children and teenagers, but if you are public aid, you don't have those two or three extra dollars it takes to gfet in 1 things. Now our com21ity is getting better economincally.

Frances came odwn 2 times to get us started. We have a core of about 8 women that do the most work. But lots of people all over town, who don't come to the meetings all of the time, still su8pport oru activities, they will be chaperones.

we paoint over graffiti, we sp;onsor fun days at the rec center.

we are not looking at getting the hard core gang members out.

we are looking to influecne the perephieral membersk, butthose who are not so inovlved and brainwashed that they think the gang we only have a few such hard voe members in sTerling.

I think a lot has to do with the parent education program word of mouth

newspaper articles

we elt the parents klow we parents let everyone know that we are not going to give up our Gang membership has fallen off because theya re not getting the ikids become gang brembers in the 6, 7 8 years.

so if we get them in the f5th and 6th grade and can protect them until they are in heigh school, then they see the end of the

we are very encouraged by Mag's earliest organization meetings we appointed one of our officers to be a liasonresults depend on who you ask and theri viewpoint.

my eprsonal feeling based on what the officers in thed ept tell me and what Is ee form police reports, is that therehas been a hery on whether they should be gang members or not along with other community efforts I think MAg has helped turn around thes periphery kids.

now a lot of kids see that gang life is not that wonderful and exciting, but filled with problems and they have decided to not join.

jtwo groups of kids

the hardcore members

the periphery kids.

mags greatest impact certaing has been with thsoe kids on the periphery, working with families abnd younger borhters and sisters.

brings to the community the real message abbut howd estructive gangs really are that helps with the hardcore members too what I am hearing back from the officers is that there is not a lot of new recruitment now we ahve ot keep the community together in working toward the goal of releasing the hardcore mebmers we need to mag to help us do that too tout her mag seems msot effective in delaing with thef amiolies of gagn members

I think motehr to mother communcation very improtant certainign godo for aprents and fmailies who already have kdis invovled in ganges.

some of these so called ahrdcore members can be redeemed too that is one of the reaons the kids don't opt out of gagns, once they get in, they feel stuck !that is why we felt from the start that it is most iprotant to cut off the amrket, the suppoly of new gagng mebmers before they get totally committed.

how can you help the hardcore members offer them support, certainly we canot' provide 24 hour police security and that sort of thing byut the support and encouragment from fmaily, friends, teachers, oragnizaitons such as mag play an important fear there is a eprceived fear that you can't get out of gangs.

that is not to say they it does not happen that they get beat one sometimes however, we have also had a lot of kids who have left the gangs that that never happened to

In Aurora, According to Judith maves, rpesident of Aurora MAG, MAG started a court watchdog program in which members accompany the families of victims to court to offer support, and by their presence in court, pressure the prosecutros to recommend harsher senctenexse for gang crimes.

MA galso steers parents to the proper social agencies.
