STOCKHOLDERS IN THE VIRGINIA COMPANY

In the past, "stockholders" was taken to mean only those individual stockholders/subscribers named in the Charter of 1609. There are two versions of the list of subscribers. The two lists are not identical but are nearly so. The first list may be found in Hening, William Waller, Virginia Statutes at Large, Vol. I. The second list, often referred to as "the Brown List", may be found in Brown, Alexander, The Genesis of the United States, Vol. II, Houghton, Mifflin, & Co., Boston and New York, 1908. Click on Adventurers for a nearly complete list of Individuals who owned shares of the Virginia Adventurer. Obviously, these lists were far short of the actual number of subscribers to the Virginia Adventure. Many of the individuals listed were also members of one or more of the Livery Companies (merchant trade guilds) of London. Members of the Livery Companies were wholesalers. They were the merchant princes of the 17c and the ones called upon to finance the wars and ventures of the sovereign.

When the 1609 "request" from the sovereign to invest in the Virginia Adventure was received by the London Livery Companies, fifty-five responded. These subscribing Livery Companies are to be found in Hening along with the names of the individual investors.

If one's ancestor were a member of a London Livery Company that purchased stock in the Virginia Company, then that ancestor was a contributor to and a stockholder in the Virginia Company of London. By proving one's descent from one or more members of any of the investing/subscribing Livery Companies, one is eligible for membership in the Jamestowne Society. Fortunately, most of the Livery Companies have their records, some dating back as far as the 1300's. Often, the records of members in the 17c show the relationships between member of the same name.

Even today, the London Livery Companies are rank ordered. The first twelve were referred to as, "the Worshipful Companies" or "the Great Companies". The following pages list the name of the fifty-five subscribing Livery Companies, the name and address of each Company's Archivist. I have used the present rank order of each of the fifty-five companies. Some companies no longer are in existence, and many new companies have been added to the list since 1609.

ADVENTURERS

The names of the persons appearing below are those listed on the Charters of 1606, 1609, 1612 and a list of stockholders in 1620. These names have been checked against names found in Alexander Brown's "Genesis of the United States". An attempt has been made to eliminate duplicates. Persons proving descent from any one of these individuals would be eligible to join the Jamestowne Society. Most of the following persons made contributions to the Virginia Company of London and held shares accordingly. Some shares were passed to heirs or sold after purchasing them. This list should be treated as a preliminary effort and not complete, although it is not likely to change significantly.
